MESSRS. M'DOWALL, STEVEN & CO., LTD., in issuing their new and revised Catalogue of Stoves, Chimney Pieces, etc., wish to state such does not illustrate anything like all the goods of this description they manufacture and supply, but what they believe to be a fairly comprehensive selection of those designs most in demand, many of which are new, and, as a rule, always in stock.

In order to meet the individual requirements of Architects and others, they will have much pleasure in submitting special designs, or work to Architects' own designs if required.

Messrs. M'DOWALL, STEVEN & Co., LTD., would strongly urge on intending purchasers the great advantage of seeing the actual goods they wish to select, and our Show Rooms being the largest and most complete in England, offer special facilities for doing so, as complete suites of Chimney Pieces, Stoves, etc., are arranged throughout, thus giving clients a better idea of the general appearance of the goods required, and saving unnecessary time and trouble when making a selection.

Catalogues of our other manufactures, such as Kitcheners, Cooking Ranges, Stable Fittings, Hot Water Apparatus for Greenhouses and Conservatories, Railing and Gates, Architectural and Artistic Iron Work, Rain Water and Sanitary Goods, Baths, etc., can be had on application.

Messrs. M'DOWALL, STEVEN & Co., LTD., can assure their numerous friends that all enquiries and orders entrusted to them will receive their most careful and prompt attention.

Customers are respectfully requested not to tear leaves out of this book for sending away, as we shall be pleased to supply loose sheets of any of the pages.

"THE SANDRINGHAM."

No. 676.—NEW PATTERN "SANDRINGHAM."

This Grate is provided with two Canopies: the one placed in front of the other acts as a blower, working upon a rack which is cast on to the front. It stops at any point, enabling the draught to be regulated ad lib.

The back and sides of the grate are entirely of Fire Brick of an improved form (as recommended by Dr Teale), by which a much greater amount of heat is radiated into the room, and the smoke arrested and consumed before reaching the chimney.

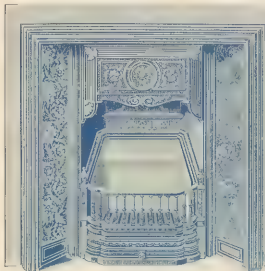

The opening through the register door being more contracted, owing to the brick inclining forward at top to within three inches of the canopy, the draught is quickened, while the combustion may be checked by means of the solid tight fitting front provided with each grate.

The bars may be of various forms, but that shown fitted with vertical steel spindles is preferable to the ordinary horizontal ones, as less obstructive to the radiation of heat.

After first lifting out the bars, both canopies can be easily removed, giving free access to the chimney. Should, therefore, the incautious use of the "blower" canopy render its replacement necessary, this can easily be effected without the removal of the entire grate. Unless built in, the brick may also be removed without the displacement of the grate.

THE "RADIANT" GRATE.

ECONOMICAL.

CURE FOR SMOKY CHIMNEYS.

CLEANLY.

SMOKELESS.

ARTISTIC IN APPEARANCE.

In many ordinary Stove Grates air is admitted in front, over, and under the fuel, causing the rate of combustion to be made too rapid. The opening into the chimney is often too large, allowing about three-quarters of the heat generated (as authorities agree) to escape, without raising the temperature of the apartment one degree. At the same time, much of the air heated by radiation is withdrawn; and this in turn creates currents and cold draughts in the room. Down-blows are also of common occurrence in this form of Grate.

THE "RADIANT" GRATE

has been designed and constructed on scientific principles, with the object of avoiding the defects referred to.

In its case the heat is thrown well out into the apartment and is not immediately withdrawn as the nozzle at the back is only sufficiently large to carry off the fumes from the fire, and any strong down-blow is effectually checked. Very bad vents can be cured by lowering the blower for a time. By this means the entrance of cold air in any quantity is prevented, obviating the danger of cold draughts.

On either side of the fire and under the canopy are enclosed chambers, through which pass constant currents of pleasantly-warmed air, adding greatly to the heating capacity of the Grate.

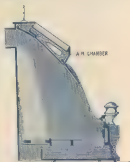

The Rate of Combustion is under complete control. It can be raised to the speed of a furnace by lowering the Blower, and reduced by the action of the Dumper in the Nozzle.

The Fire must not be heaped up with Coal. Fuel of an inferior quality can be used, and that is burned to an ash, leaving no cinder.

It is almost entirely Smokeless. The hot air supplied from below renders the fumes inflammable, and a bright, Smokeless Fire is the result.

Its construction is simple and substantial. The Blower is an integral part of the Grate, and can be lowered or raised by one motion.

The Design follows graceful outlines, and the Grate can be finished in a variety of simple or decorative styles.

IMPROVED ECONOMIC SLOW COMBUSTION HOT-AIR STOVE. 677

Base can be made solid all round
when bringing the air from outside of the Building.

No. 1544.

The construction of this Stove is different from all others—the sides are made of a series of hollow columns—up these columns the heated air passes, and out through the perforated top. The surface of the Stove is much increased by the form of the sides—thereby giving out a greater amount of radiant heat.

The fireplace being made of thick fire-brick lining, the heat passes slowly through to the outside of the Stove, is radiated into the apartment from a large and moderately-heated surface, affording a genial and well-diffused temperature throughout.

When lighting the fire turn the indicator A pointing towards the flue—this gives direct communication to the chimney—also opening the door in front at the same time; when well kindled turn the indicator A pointing upwards, and nearly shutting the door in front, the Stove then works through the three chambers or flues at the back, down the two side ones, up the middle into the flue. The heat is nearly all extracted at the end of this journey before entering the chimney.

Unusual facilities are given for cleaning the flues—remove the charging door, lift off the two perforated tops and cover B (which is kept tight by a sand joint), give the thumb-piece C a quarter turn and lift, free access is now had to the three flues at back, removing the soot by the door D.

This Laundry Stove is specially adapted for large Laundries where a number of Fires require to be heated and is less liable to derangement than others as there is no fluing. All the Fires are separate Castings, and if only a small Fire is required the Top Fires may be lifted off and the bottom one used only.

It is also useful for other purposes besides Laundries where a great heat is required.

Can be had with Draw out Ashpan
8 - extra.

These Boilers are brought out to meet the demand for a good and cheap boiler for small green-houses. They are much improved in construction.

The Nos. 1, 2, and 3 have fronts made in pieces to throw off the expansion easily, with water round the back, sides, and top; fresh air draught inlets, safety plate, gills projecting into the fire, check plate to close, to throw the flame to the back and top of the boiler before ascending the smoke pipe.

The No. 5 has water way front, also water way check plate, each cast in one piece.

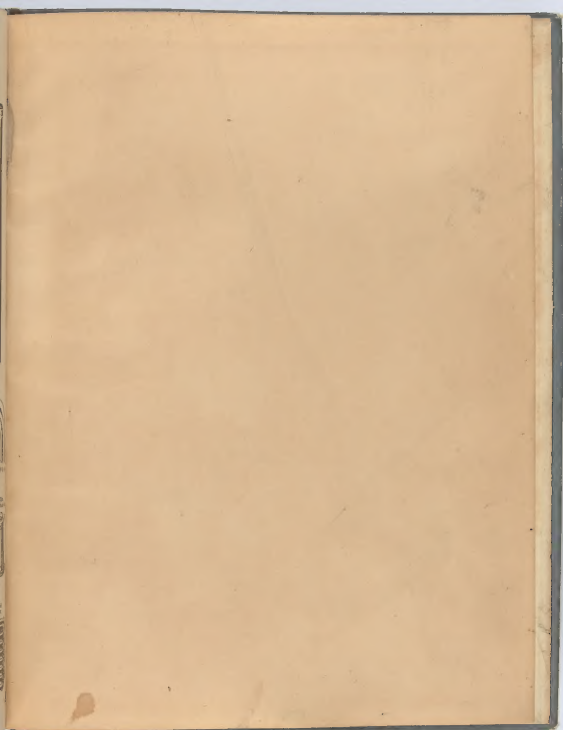

The No. 6 has water way front, which is cast in one piece.

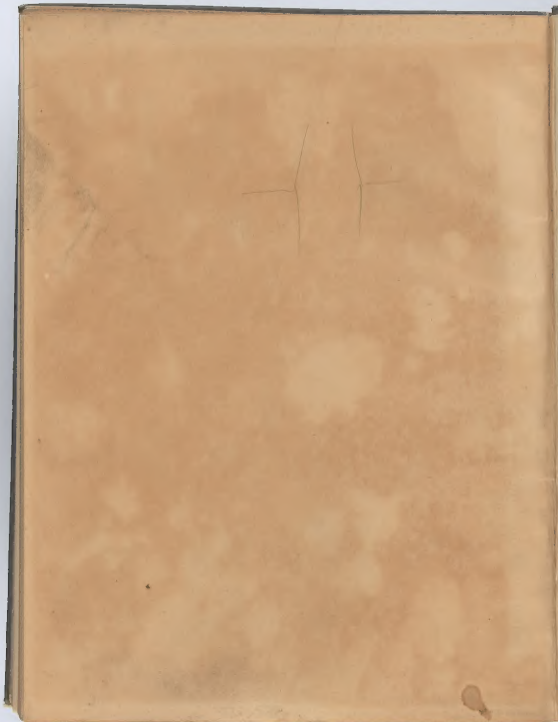

The No. 6s, which has besides water way front, also water way check plate, and water way round nozzle of smoke pipe. The perspective view, plan, and section show the design of the boiler.
